The sub contractors under the Pacific Dredging Company are making good headway in removing the old wrecks in Rotten Row. A lot of timber and ship iron was brought ashore today and by next month there will be a clean passage for the suction dredger to work on.

Miss Robinson, who was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ott, left in the Alameda on account of a cable announcing the death of her father, Captain David Robinson, master of the barkentine Skagit, who died on his vessel on February 9, while going from San Pedro for Port Gamble, and was buried at sea.

On entering the channel at an early hour this morning the Mauna Loa almost experienced a similar accident to the schooner Mary E. Foster last Monday. After awaiting for over an hour for the dredger to move and give her a passage the Mauna Loa tried to pass in close to the reef and had a narrow escape from hanging on the spit, bumping on the sand several times. Unless she proves more agreeable in the future the big dredger is liable to get disliking by the Inter Island mariners.

LAST TRIBUTE TO LATE C. M. WHITE

The funeral of the late Clarence M. White, held yesterday afternoon from the Masonic Temple, was very largely attended by members of fraternal bodies and friends of the family in all walks of life, who expressed their esteem of their late associate and sympathy for his family. The services were held under the auspices of Oceanic Lodge 371, F. & A. M. Worshipful Master Bockus in charge. The hall of the Temple was crowded and a mass of floral tributes completely covered the casket. Among the most notable pieces was a floral Masonic emblem from Oceanic lodge, floral shield from Wm. McKinley lodge Knights of Pythias, floral star from Eastern Star, floral pillow from Excelsior Lodge of Odd Fellows, shield of violets and ferns from the Public Works department, floral cross from Rathbone Sisters, wreath from Pacific lodge of Rebekahs.

Following the brief ceremony in the Temple the procession of Masons and friends was formed and moved to the cemetery. Interment was in the burial plot of the lodge close to the entrance of Nuuanu cemetery. Here the very impressive burial rites of the Masonic order were conducted by Worshipful Master Bockus, assisted by Past Masters Towse, Ward and Farrington of Oceanic lodge and Past Master Spaulding of Hawaiian lodge. A quartet of ladies from the Eastern Star sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and the services closed with a brief ceremony by the Knights of Pythias, led by Col. Zeigler. The pall bearers were John Hughes, John Ouderkerk, E. I. Spaulding, George A. Davis, P. M. Lucas, L. de L. Ward, Ed Towse and H. T. Moore.
